I found a great answer to my interpersonal debate and inward doubt.

I am not society, but I lead a path through life, that relates to the lives of others.

I found a diagnostic, by using my equipment, and via the process of coming through illness, and development(s), of which would be a great example to go forward with, a kind of solution to a symptom of violence and disease cycles, of complexity.

You see, mathematics contains ordered symbolism in that of any pattern, like the origin of life, hence, going forward (and it says little of meaning) we, as people can indeed make directed decisions, when, as such, we begin with a prepared mind and situational setup.

Thus, I am finally at the stage, I may dedicate to helping people, and a healing power, in relation to coming thru illness.

My team, in this respect, and the commitments of 'finding the fire within' have been a success, it is a great thing to develop. Not a job for office work, or that of education for no-reason than an intellectual 'exercise' - or that of military, or a government position, it is the dream from kindergarten, carried, thru all of my life, to this present.

And it means that we survive as a species beyond things like disease and global warming. I took on problems like this, as that of what was necessary for my sense of security, was to know, in a deep sense, that other's lives held a continuation. It is the position of the philanthropist, and you, would be proud of me.

This is like the prince or the king, or the sage, with humility.

This is not a religious or scientific doctrine, nor a biography, one thing, entirely new, an ultimate conclusive good for a world, my gift.
